

EMBODIED BEING

Confidentiality Policy

A placeholder policy outlining how confidential information may be handled within Embodied Being.

Our approach

Embodied Being aims to handle personal and therapeutic information respectfully, securely and only for legitimate professional purposes.

Limits of confidentiality

A final policy should explain any circumstances in which information may need to be shared, including safeguarding concerns, serious risk, legal requirements or professional supervision.

Record keeping

The approved policy should specify what records are retained, how they are secured, retention periods and how clients may request access or correction.

Supervision and consultation

Where anonymised clinical material is discussed in professional supervision, identifying information should be limited wherever possible.

Questions or concerns

Clients should be given a clear route to ask questions or raise concerns about confidentiality and information handling.

Important: This is placeholder content created for website setup. It must be reviewed and replaced or approved by the practitioner before publication or client use.